hospital chaplains to develop their ability to understand human illness and crises and to enhance their self-knowledge and interpersonal skills.

7. CONFIDENTIALITY
Legislation concerning the Church and health care system lays down in detail the obligation for hospital chaplains to maintain confidentiality.

Confessional privilege of a hospital chaplain is governed by the Church Act, and it cannot be breached. The purpose of the privilege is to protect people who confide in a pastor. However, there are issues that override the seal of confessional privilege. An employee of the Church must be able to recognize victims of mental, spiritual, physical or sexual abuse. In certain circumstances a pastor must report a crime or criminal intent regardless of confessional privilege. A hospital chaplain is under obligation to report abuse*.

8. PATIENT RELATIONSHIP
At the core of hospital chaplaincy is the confidential pastoral care relationship between the hospital chaplain and patient, in which the patient can address all issues of his/her life and illness, and receive spiritual support and consolation. The contact between the chaplain and the patient is usually initiated by the patient or his/her family. Discussions with a doctor or nurses may also direct the patient towards initial contact. In the interest of maintaining the autonomy of the patient, the chaplain first ensures that the contact is indeed the will of the patient, and then proceeds to agree on the practices, goals and principles of the cooperation.

The chaplain will, if necessary, be in contact with other churches or religious communities in order to secure the pastoral care that the patient wishes for.

9. CARE TEAM
Patient care is a co-operative effort involving several professional groups in the health care system. The hospital chaplain can, if given permission by the patient, act in an advisory capacity in his/her own area of expertise regarding matters concerning the patient. The hospital chaplain is responsible both to the care team and parish administration. The Church is responsible for maintaining the Christian identity of hospital chaplaincy and safeguarding its high quality.

Principles for Hospital Chaplaincy

1. POSITION OF HOSPITAL CHAPLAINCY
The foundations of the hospital chaplaincy maintained by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland lie on one hand in the fundamental mission of the Church and, on the other hand, in the joint decisions and recommendations of the Church and the health care system:

Kehittyvän avohoidon haaste seurakunnan sielunhoitotehtävälle. Suomen evankelis-luterilaisen kirkon piispainkokous, kirjelmä no 6, 12.9.1989. (The challenge of the developing outpatient care to the parish pastoral care givers. The Bishops’ Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland, letter No. 6, 12 September, 1989; in Finnish only).

Hospital chaplains are employees of parishes working in a health care setting.

2. VALUES IN HOSPITAL CHAPLAINCY
Hospital chaplaincy maintained by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland works hand in hand with the health care system. Church strategy establishes the following four values: respect for the sacred, responsibility, justice, and truthfulness.

The aim of health care is in the promotion of health, prevention and treatment of disease and alleviation of suffering. The objective of pastoral care is to address the religious, spiritual and life-view questions of the sick and suffering.

3. EVOLVING REQUIREMENTS
Changes in health care impact hospital chaplaincy. The understanding of illness changes as medicine evolves. Individualism and strengthening privacy protection present new challenges to a care setting. Increased information on illness and treatment affects health care structures. Hospital stays are shortening. Hospital chaplaincy supports patients and health care professionals in this development. As the need for pastoral care in non-institutional care settings increases, the co-operation between parish workers becomes increasingly important and calls for new practices.

The ethic, cultural and religious background of both patients and health care staff is becoming more diverse. The life-view and existential distress is no longer expressed exclusively in religious terms. A hospital chaplain must have expertise in the ethics of various religions and the health care setting.

4. ACT ON RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND ACT ON THE STATUS AND RIGHTS OF PATIENTS – EFFECTS ON HOSPITAL CHAPLAINCY
Everyone living in Finland has the right to religious freedom. The Act on Religious Freedom of 2003 bestows religious freedom as a positive right. According to section 11 of the Constitution of Finland, everyone has the freedom of religion and conscience. Freedom of religion and conscience entails the right to profess and practice a religion, the right to express one’s convictions and the right to be or decline to be a member of a religious community. No one is under the obligation, against his/her conscience, to participate in the practice of a religion.

Religious freedom is both an individual and a communal right. An example of this is for a patient and the pastoral care-giver to practice a common religion together, if they both so wish.

5. MISSION OF HOSPITAL CHAPLAINS
Hospital chaplains – both ordained and non-ordained – are employees of the Evangelical Lutheran Church. Their duty is to serve patients, their families and the health care staff as experts in questions concerning the values and view of life stirred by illness. Hospital chaplains promote holistic care by supporting the whole care community, and serve as a link between the religious communities and the health care system. If necessary, hospital chaplains participate in the deliberation of ethical questions in health care.

The duties of hospital chaplains also involve the non-institutional care setting, as well as supervision and training for both parish and health care staff. Voluntary work, as well as pastoral care after crises and disasters, brings additional duties to hospital chaplains. Religious and spiritual support in palliative care, support for grieving families and co-operation with the police and rescue services require the expertise of a hospital chaplain.

Discussions between hospital chaplains and patients do not always occur on religious terms, but there is a presence of a deeper dimension, a sense of the sacred. A hospital chaplain is an expert in spiritual issues, and an interpreter of the religious language. A hospital chaplain’s duty is to bring the sacred to the everyday bustle of a hospital.

6. PROFESSIONAL SKILLS
In order to work as a hospital chaplain, one must pass an aptitude test and complete a specialised programme approved by the Church. Continuing education and supervision help
